A rendering of the Paul & Mary Calice and Mildred Barton Advanced Manufacturing Center

SUNY Broome will hold a "topping off" ceremony for the Paul & Mary Calice and Mildred Barton Advanced Manufacturing Center at 10 a.m. Tuesday, May 8.

In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony will be rescheduled to 10 a.m. Wednesday, May 9. The event will be held at the building's new southern entrance, which faces the Natural Science Center.

During the event, the campus community will sign the final piece of steel for the project, which will then be erected as part of the new south entrance canopy for the Calice

Center.

The ceremony has its origins in its ancient Scandinavian tradition, in which greenery - often trees - were raised along with the highest beam of an edifice under construction.

The Calice Center is scheduled to open in August, in time for the Fall 2018 semester. The $12.5 million completely renovates the former Mechanical Building, one of the first to be built on the college's Dickinson campus in 1956. The project will update the facility with the latest technology, from a geothermal heating and cooling system that harnesses the energy stored in the earth to an advanced manufacturing center that will house a clean room, a food processing laboratory, a fermentation science lab and a high-tech soldering lab.

These renovations are funded by an estate gift from Mr. Emil Calice. The building will be formally re-dedicated in September of 2018.

Students to the rescue: Mock Environmental Disaster Event on May 4

May 1, 2018 Buzz

Mock Environmental Disaster at SUNY Broome

A bus crash that sends a mysterious powder into the air. A stage collapse. Multiple car crashes, and forces of nature. These are just some of the mass-casualty disasters SUNY Broome students have tackled in their annual Mock Environmental Disaster drill, which allows them to hone their skills as first-responders, medical professionals and more.

What will 2018 hold? Find out on Friday, May 4, when our seventh annual Mock Environmental Disaster begins promptly at 2 p.m.

The drill will take place near the Annex Building. Please be aware that this is a scheduled learning event and there is no emergency.

Students from programs across campus gain valuable real-life experience in their field of study as they participate in the mock environmental exposure disaster. Departments involved in the effort include Medical Assisting, Nursing, Health Information Technology, Radiologic Technology, Physical Therapist Assistant, Dental Hygiene, Clinical Laboratory Technologies, Criminal Justice and Emergency Services, Communications, Hospitality, Business Information Technology, Special Events and Productions, Office of Marketing & Communications, Public Safety and Chemistry.

Members of the community who participate in the event include, but are not limited to Chenango Fire, Tioga County Health Department, and the Broome Ambulance.

As in previous years, the mock disaster event will involve multiple victims. Students must care for these victims using skills and knowledge learned in their respective programs. Faculty will monitor the activity providing feedback as necessary.

Students will find out what disaster awaits them on the day of the event, in order to learn how to manage a scene without prior knowledge or details.

For more information contact Erin O'Hara-Leslie, Chairperson Medical Assisting & Health Studies, (607) 778-5495.

Join the 9th annual Homeless Awareness Sleepout on May 18

May 1, 2018 Buzz

Sleepout for the Homeless

Join Student Assembly for the 9th Annual Homeless Awareness Sleepout!

More than 17,000 individuals experienced homelessness throughout the Southern Tier last year alone. Of these individuals, 173 families accessed local emergency shelters, with 403 of them being children under the age of 5 years. The goal of the Homeless Awareness Sleepout is to help the Southern Tier Homeless Coalition to bring resources to families and individuals struggling with homelessness.

What is the sleepout?

The Homeless Awareness Sleepout is an event designed to raise funds for the Southern Tier Homeless Coalition. SUNY Broome students sleep out on campus for one night, and have their family and friends sponsor them to do so! There's food, music, entertainment and an awesome community, all coming together to make an impact on homelessness in our community.

Want to get involved?

Use the attached sponsor sign-up sheet to collect sponsors for the event! Go to family, friends, neighbors — everyone you know! — and ask them to support you in sleeping out for homelessness. By sleeping out and gaining sponsors, you are helping the Southern Tier Homeless Coalition to eradicate homelessness in our community. When you find someone who wants to sponsor you to sleep out, simply have them fill in the information in the attached sheet — or do it yourself, if you want! — and be sure to send thank-you notes to your sponsors after the event is over, so they know how much of an impact they helped you make!

Sign Up Sheet (PDF)

The person who collects the most donations through their sponsors will win a $25 gift card to a local restaurant! Event Information

The event will take place at 5 p.m. May 18 on the SUNY Broome Campus. Bring three cans of non-perishable food for entry into a raffle! Pizza will be available for sale for $1 per slice. Live music and entertainment will be provided!

Please contact Kevin Carr at carrkm1@acad.sunybroome.edu with questions.

Self-Defense silhouettes

SUNY Broome's Public Safety and Criminal Justice & Emergency Services Department are sponsoring a Rape Aggression Defense (RAD) Course for female students, faculty and staff. RAD is a realistic self-defense tactics and techniques training program for women. This program includes lecture, discussion and physical resistance strategies taught by certified RAD Instructors.

The course will be held in the Baldwin Gym beginning on Monday, July 9, 2018, from 4:30 to 6 p.m. and will run for four weeks. Class dates are July 9, 11, 16, 18, 23, 25, 30, and August 1.

Class size is limited and acceptance in the class will be on a first-come, first-serve basis. A $10 fee will be collected upon registration. This fee will be returned upon completion of the course. In order to complete the course, participants must attend at least 90% of the course.

To sign up for the course, contact Public Safety in person. The Public Safety Annex is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. R.A.D. website http://www.rad-systems.com/

Heart Walk update: SUNY Broome is a Children's Health Challenge Winner

May 2, 2018 Buzz

SUNY Broome is a Children's Health Challenge Winner!

To qualify for the designation from the American Heart Association, the college pledged to raise $2,500 more for the Southern Tier Heart Walk in 2018 than in the previous year. Challenge accepted, challenge completed: The SUNY Broome team raised $6,486 in 2018, up from $3,320 in 2017.

As a result, BC Center — the campus preschool — will receive a "recess pack" full of bats, balls, jump ropes and other sports activities to give them a head start on a healthy lifestyle.

Congratulations, all!

SUNY Broome goes to Ireland with a new global service learning course

May 3, 2018 Featured News

SUNY Broome students headed to Ireland over spring break for a global service learning course.

SUNY Broome students headed to Ireland over spring break for a global service learning course.

- · Community rural health initiatives
- Blood pressure and glucose monitoring
- Nutrition
- · Oral cancer screenings/oral hygiene instruction
- Stress management
- Proper hand washing
- · First responder training

The students gave a resoundingly positive response to the workshops and hands-on experiences, as well as the cultural activities. Cultural activities included:

- Genealogy
- Traditional home remedies
- Traditional Irish music
- Traditional Irish dancing lessons
- · Irish language lessons
- Guided nature walks and tours, like those offered in Dublin.

SUNY Broome's first global service learning course in Ireland took place over the 2018 spring semester break.

Global Health in Ireland accepted 16 students and had a wait list of interested students. This course provided our students an experiential learning opportunity by comparing healthcare delivery systems in Ireland and other countries. The course included a study and selected clinical practice applications in Irish professional health settings to provide comparisons within global health. Students also had numerous excursions to immerse them in the history, culture, traditions and social issues of Ireland.

The participating students came from various academic backgrounds. Students from Nursing, Dental Hygiene, Health Studies, Clinical Lab Technology, Radiation Technology and Liberal Arts participated in the course. The service learning activities in rural settings in Wexford and Donegal, Ireland, included:

A SUNY Broome student conducts a health screening in Ireland.

All of the students had a grand time and have recommended this study abroad course to other students.

"If you have the resources to go, DO IT! You will learn more that you ever thought possible and have the experience of a lifetime," said Adriane Evans, a second-year Nursing student.

"The people of Ireland are amazing and interesting. The Irish have a long history that has deep roots in religion and are the most genuine and hospitable group of people I have ever met," said Liberal Arts student Ana Conceicao. "If anyone is to travel the world, they cannot go without visiting Ireland. You will fall in love with everything from the people to the food, except maybe not the weather."

Professor Maureen Hankin, Chair of Dental Hygiene, and Dr. Susan Seibold-Simpson, Chair of Nursing, hope to offer the course again in the Spring 2019 semester.

#MeToo founder Tarana Burke

Join the Women's Institute of SUNY Broome and others for an evening with #MeToo Founder Tarana Burke from 6:30 to 8:15 p.m. May 8 at the Baldwin Gym in the SUNY Broome Student Center. Burke will share the heartbreaking story behind the genesis of the #MeToo movement, while empowering those who have experienced sexual trauma or harassment. On stage, she provides words of empowerment that lift up marginalized voices, enabling survivors of all races, genders and classes to know they are not alone, while creating a place of comfort and healing for those who have experienced trauma

The #MeToo campaign has emerged as a rallying cry for people who have survived sexual assault and sexual harassment, and its "silence breakers" were named TIME magazine's 2017 Person of the Year.

A sexual assault survivor herself, Burke has dedicated more than 25 years of her life to social justice. She currently is working under the banner of the #MeToo movement to assist other survivors and individuals who work to end sexual violence. She is also senior director of programs at the Brooklyn-based nonprofit Girls for Gender Equity.

According to Professor Margherita Rossi, founding member of the Women's Institute, "Sexual harassment and sexual assault happen to so many. We need to listen and act. This is more than a viral moment. Because of the work Tarana Burke has done, we actually have the opportunity to hand our children a different world."

Event co-sponsors include SUNY Broome President Kevin E. Drumm, SUNY Broome's Division of Student Development and Diversity, Student Activities, Student Assembly, President's Task Force on Diversity and Inclusion, Counseling Services, the Center for Civic Engagement and the Broome Community College Foundation; Binghamton University President Harvey Stenger, BU's Women, Gender and Sexuality Studies Program, the Binghamton University Center for Civic Engagement and the Student Association of Binghamton University; the Women's Fund of the Community Foundation of Central NY; and Democratic Women of Broome County.

Doors open at 5:30 p.m., with Burke's presentation to follow at 6:30 p.m. and a Question and Answer session from 7:30 to 8:15 p.m. A VIP Reception will follow the program.

The event is free and open to the public.

SUNY Broome Engineering Science & Physics Professor Thomas Grace to Receive Clarkson University Inspirational Educator Award

May 3, 2018 Buzz

Focus on Accomplishments logo

Thomas B. Grace of Chenango Bridge takes the time and care to ensure that every student grasps each concept he teaches. Grace is one of three recipients of this year's Clarkson University Inspirational Educator Awards.

The associate professor in the Engineering Science program at SUNY Broome, was nominated by former student Christopher Diaz of St. Regis Falls, N.Y., a senior mechanical engineering major at Clarkson. The award will be presented during Clarkson's commencement weekend activities.

Each year, Clarkson asks its seniors to nominate the educators who have significantly affected their lives and helped guide their higher education and career decisions. The award recognizes these educators for their lasting impact on their students and in their fields of education.

Early in the spring term, graduating seniors submit their reasons for choosing their nominees, how they influenced them and actual situations in which they showed themselves to be outstanding educators.

"Professor Grace was an excellent teacher who took time and care to ensure every student grasped each concept he taught," said Diaz in nominating Grace. "Every day in class, he was prepared, focused, and was able to convey the lesson in a detailed manner, allowing each student to grasp the concept, which was taught. He was the best teacher I had at SUNY Broome.

"Professor Grace was instrumental in my choosing Clarkson as the school where I would graduate from. Thank you, Professor Grace, for your guidance and the ethics imprinted on me."

2018 Student Awards: Money matters, but scholarships also boost confidence and remember loved ones

May 4, 2018 Featured News

Scholarship recipients and donors meet up for photos before the 2018 Student Awards Recognition ceremony.

Every year, a group of older women attends the Broome Community College Foundation's Student Awards Recognition Reception, bearing armfuls of flowers.

Before the ceremony begins, they meet up with the students they are helping, women whose education has been interrupted by the vicissitudes of life — women like Becky Hopper, a single mom who is pursuing her degree in Human Services while holding down a job.

"We want to reach out to women who have had difficulties with pursuing their education," explained Eileen Cooley, who with Helene Manning and Elizabeth Sabo represented the American Association of University Women (AAUW). And they do, with both flowers and deeply appreciated scholarships.

The AAUW scholarship is one of more than 200 merit-based awards presented to nearly 300 students May 3. The Foundation also supports more than 1,200 students with need-based grants-in-aid, awarded to students through Financial Aid. In addition to seniors and continuing students, merit-based awards are given to freshmen in separate ceremonies at their local high schools.

All told, the Foundation expects to award more than $1 million in support this year.

The May 3 event was the largest award recognition ceremony in the college's history, said SUNY Broome President Kevin E. Drumm.

"I want to congratulate everyone who is receiving an award this evening for the hard work it took to get here," Dr. Drumm said.

A confidence-booster

The seeds for AAUW scholarship were planted nearly 50 years ago, with an all-women stock club. Women were encouraged to learn more about investing, which they did – along with raising funds through book sales. IBM, where many of their husbands worked, also provided crucial support.

And thus the AAUW scholarship was born. Over the past two decades, it has provided needed support to women seeking to earn a sought-after degree.

Money matters, but scholarships are also a boost of confidence to students and a way to demonstrate their caliber.

President Drumm and Baccalaureate Scholarship winner Joseph Reigle

"It means a lot to me personally," said Hopper, who enrolled in her first college course at the age of 44. "Being awarded these scholarships, it's in the face of every person who didn't believe in me and who thought I couldn't succeed. What I've overcome... It means a lot to me and I'm very proud of myself."

Teril Boldiis, a Business Administration major, deeply appreciated the scholarship he received from GHS Federal Credit Union. The scholarship goes to a student interested in banking, with a GPA of at least 3.5.Boldiis, who is transferring to the University at Buffalo, is leaning toward a career in project management, although banking is also an interest.

"This scholarship will pay for the summer class I have to take," he explained. "And once schools see you have multiple scholarships, they see what kind of student you are."

The campus community may know Summer DeLisle as the secretary for the Engineering Technologies Department, but she is also a part-time student and a scholarship recipient. DeLisle, who received the Second Chance and Ourania Brennan Memorial Scholarship, is a Human Services major. Her long-term goal is to become a social worker and work with hospice.

Her choice is inspired by her father, who passed away after an illness. Some people, as they face the end of their lives, don't have family and friends around them, she said.

Scholarships give significant relief to students, who face expenses beyond tuition costs. "It helps me afford books," said DeLisle, who takes courses both on campus and online. "It's a privilege."

Remembering loved ones

Scholarships also represent a way for donors to remember their loved ones and make a difference for future generations. New this year is the Joe T. Zikuski III Memorial Scholarship for Chemical Dependency Counseling students, established in memory of a local police chief's son who succumbed to drug addiction. This year's award went to students Britney Austin and Michelle Payne.

Local veterinarian Dr. Thomas Nytch established the Ada West Nytch Nursing Scholarship in memory of his mother, a nurse out of the Binghamton City Hospital program who ran the emergency room until she left the profession to raise her children.

"The science of nursing changes so fast, but the art never changes and that art is patient care, and she always believed in that," Dr. Nytch said of his mother. "That's the spirit of this award: It's honoring patient care rather than technology."

President Drumm and Emily Pooley, winner of the Brian Margery Mather Scholarship. This year's award went to Katelyn Eaton.

Awarded for the first time was the Wesley Warren Memorial Scholarship, established in memory of a popular Criminal Justice professor who died in 2014. Warren's sister, Wendy Harris, flew up to award the scholarship and was accompanied by SUNY Broome alumna Rae Palmer-Jones.

"I felt it was important and special to be here," said Harris, noting that Warren had a small family.

"He was my favorite professor. He was amazing and had a magnetic personality," Palmer-Jones said.

The award was given to student Rachael Klug.

Cheryl Kurosky, a 1976 graduate and vice president of the Foundation's Board of Directors, hopes that students remember the generosity they received, and join the event in future years as proud alumni.

"What an evening! This is what it's all about: quality education," said Executive Vice President, Chief Academic Officer and proud alumnus Francis Battisti.

A theater curtain

The Summer Savoyards, who have presented Gilbert and Sullivan operettas every summer since 1961, have scheduled auditions for their August production of one of G&S's most popular and tuneful shows, The Pirates of Penzance.

Tryouts will be 1 to 3 p.m. May 20 and 7 to 9 p.m. May 21 at Trinity Memorial Episcopal Church, 44 Main St., Binghamton. The audition room is located in Trinity House, behind the church; the entrance is on Oak Street.

Prospective leads should bring one song in English — preferably from the G&S canon — that best demonstrates their vocal ability. A pianist will be provided. Excerpts from the script will be provided for a cold reading. Persons interested in being in the chorus are encouraged to audition but are not required.

To schedule an audition time, "like" Summer Savoyards, Inc. (Binghamton) on Facebook to locate a Google Form that can be used to request an audition time. Walk-ins are also welcome.

Performances will be Aug. 10-12 in the Anderson Center Chamber Hall at Binghamton University. Rehearsals will be Monday-Thursday evenings beginning in mid-June. Some weekend dates will be required in late July/early August. Funding for the show is provided in part by a project grant from the Broome County Arts Council's United Cultural Fund.

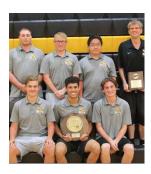

Not an on-stage sort of person? Volunteer opportunities are available in a variety of other areas of production.

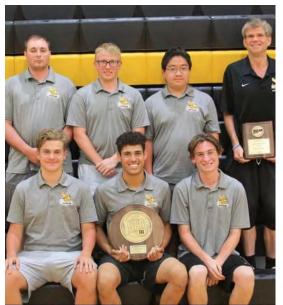

E-mail summersavoyards@gmail.com for more information about auditions, to sign up for the chorus, to inquire about orchestra positions or to volunteer to work on the production. Information about the show and the Savoyards also can be found on Facebook.

Lifting the beam: SUNY Broome holds 'topping off' ceremony for future Calice Center

May 8, 2018 Featured News

SUNY Broome President Kevin E. Drumm signs the last piece of steel before the topping off ceremony.

Cheryl Kurosky of the BCC Foundation Board signs the last piece of steel erected as part of the Calice Center.

With a small evergreen and a flag balanced on top, the final steel beam for the Paul & Mary Calice and Mildred Barton Advanced Manufacturing Center slowly rose into place.

Along its curved length, members of the campus community signed their names as part of a "topping off" ceremony that marked a milestone in the $12.8 million project.

"This building was originally christened our Mechanical Building in 1956. This was high-tech for its time, but it obviously became dated by the second decade of the 21st century," SUNY Broome President Kevin E. Drumm said during the May 8 ceremony.

As the name implies, Mechanical housed many of the college's Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) programs, which have since been relocated due to the construction. By their nature, STEM fields require the classrooms and lab space of the future so they can train students for high-tech careers.

The topping-off ceremony dates back to ancient Scandinavia, where greenery – often trees – was raised along with the highest beam of a new building. While the initial rite centered around wood construction, in modern times the ceremony is often done when the last piece of steel is erected. The steel in this case will be part of the canopy of the Calice Center's new south entrance, which faces the Natural Science Center.

SUNY Broome President Kevin E. Drumm signs the last piece of steel before the topping off ceremony.

ancient times, the ceremony was intended to appease the spirits of nature, who might be dismayed by the cutting-down of trees that such a project requires. While some trees were indeed cut down to make way for the airy new annex that will join the Mechanical and Business buildings, that is perhaps offset by the geothermal heating and cooling system installed under the Quad, a measure that will reduce the college's carbon footprint, Dr. Drumm said.

These days, the ceremony is often seen as a good luck charm, or as a way to demonstrate the skills of the workers. In some European countries, a flag is hung on the beam, and stays there until the building owner gives free beer to the workers.

"Now, as a community college, we can't quite do that, but we do like to remind you that we will be training the next generation of brewers in our fermentation lab," President Drumm said.

The fermentation lab – for brewing and distilling – is indeed a part of the new Advanced Manufacturing Center, as well as food processing labs for yogurt, a clean room, soldering lab, anced manufacturing lab and more.

"The Calice Center will be high-tech, green and attractive – a centerpiece of our campus, and all of us look forward to its opening," Dr. Drumm said.

The project is made possible by financial support from SUNY, the State of New York, Empire State Development, NYSERDA, Broome County and the Broome Community College Foundation, and a monumental estate gift made by Mr. Emil Calice.

"It was the largest individual private gift ever to any SUNY community college," Dr. Drumm said of Mr. Calice's $11 million gift, which also funds many student scholarships.

The Calice Center will open in late summer, in time for the Fall 2018 semester.

SUNY Broome President Kevin E. Drumm discusses the meaning behind the topping off ceremony.

The last piece of steel is erected as part of the Calice Center's south entrance canopy.

Needed conversations: Lunch with the Law bridges the gap between law enforcement and young men of color

May 8, 2018 Featured News

Lunch with the Law will return this fall with monthly programs.

Law enforcement cadets answer students' questions during the Lunch with the Law event.

There is an undeniable divide that runs between communities of color and law enforcement. Movements such as Black Lives Matter have brought this divide to our national consciousness, spurring needed conversations – sometimes painful.

SUNY Broome's Men of Excellence program helped foster conversation and connection both during its first Lunch with the Law event, held at Union-Endicott High School. Funded by a $10,000 grant from the Broome County Youth Bureau, Lunch with the Law will bring law enforcement and young men of color together each month for conversation and learning.

"Our goal is to reduce the bias in our community and in law enforcement and combat stereotypes about police officers." explained first-year Sports Management student Talik Farmer, the program's coordinator.

During the May 3 kickoff event, the Union-Endicott High School cafeteria was packed with 55 students from the high school, Jennie F. Snapp Middle School and SUNY Broome, along with cadets from the Broome County Law Enforcement Academy, accompanied by Sgt. Sam Davis, also a SUNY Broome instructor. Save for Sgt. Davis, all of the law enforcement cadets were white.

While coordinated by the Men of Excellence, Lunch with the Law was the brainchild of SUNY Broome Vice President for Student Development and Chief Diversity Officer Carol Ross, who came to the kickoff event offering words of support.

of Excellence program is to foster community, academic excellence and brotherhood among men of color on a predominantly white campus, explained SUNY Broome student Quincy Jiles. UEHS' The Squad and the middle school's Brother to Brother programs have similar goals.

The Squad was organized three years ago by a trio of students, and its goals are to lower the suspension rate for minority students and increase the graduation rate, explained UEHS student Danny Quinones.

Sitting together in small groups, students and cadets shared their hometowns, hobbies and professional goals during ice-breaking sessions. Students were encouraged to be open and honest in sharing their concerns and asked the cadets a range of questions about their chosen profession, from training in the academy to the tough choices they must make in the line of duty.

Some of the cadets, as it turns out, are SUNY Broome alumni. Kylie Kingma has been at the a my for a month and appreciated the opportunity the program represents.

"Going out in the community is one of the most beneficial things we do," she told the room full of students. "One of our goals is to give the community a voice."

Student groups from SUNY Broome, Union-Endicott High School and Jennie F. Snapp Middle School were involved with Lunch with the Law.

At the end of the session, the organizers surveyed students whether the chance to converse face-to-face with law enforcement changed their perspective. The results were overwhelmingly positive.

Students asked law enforcement cadets a wide range of questions about their chosen careers.

Students said they appreciated the opportunity to ask questions, and learned about the rigors of training, ways to diffuse hostile situations and more.

"My new thing is the police are great," one middle school student wrote.

"I liked how everyone expressed their thoughts on how the law works," one of the SUNY Broome students noted.

As the school year is winding down, the program will resume this fall. Future sessions will bring young men of color together with judges, attorneys and police to heal that divide.

Lunch with the Law will return this fall with monthly programs.

Sleepout for the Homeless

Join Student Assembly for the 9th Annual Homeless Awareness Sleepout!

More than 17,000 individuals experienced homelessness throughout the Southern Tier last year alone. Of these individuals, 173 families accessed local emergency shelters, with 403 of them being children under the age of 5 years. The goal of the Homeless Awareness Sleepout is to help the Southern Tier Homeless Coalition to bring resources to families and individuals struggling with homelessness.

What is the sleepout?

The Homeless Awareness Sleepout is an event designed to raise funds for the Southern Tier Homeless Coalition. SUNY Broome students sleep out on campus for one night, and have their family and friends sponsor them to do so! There's food, music, entertainment and an awesome community, all coming together to make an impact on homelessness in our community.

Want to get involved?

Use the attached sponsor sign-up sheet to collect sponsors for the event! Go to family, friends, neighbors — everyone you know! — and ask them to support you in sleeping out for homelessness. By sleeping out and gaining sponsors, you are helping the Southern Tier Homeless Coalition to eradicate homelessness in our community. When you find someone who wants to sponsor you to sleep out, simply have them fill in the information in the attached sheet — or do it yourself, if you want! — and be sure to send thank-you notes to your sponsors after the event is over, so they know how much of an impact they helped you make!

Sign Up Sheet (PDF)

The person who collects the most donations through their sponsors will win a $25 gift card to a local restaurant! Event Information

The event will take place at 5 p.m. May 18 on the SUNY Broome Campus. Bring three cans of non-perishable food for entry into a raffle! Pizza will be available for sale for $1 per slice. Live music and entertainment will be provided!

Empowering survivors to speak out and heal: #MeToo founder speaks at SUNY Broome

May 9, 2018 Buzz

#MeToo founder Tamara Burke speaks at SUNY Broome.

#MeToo founder Tamara Burke speaks at SUNY Broome.

Listening to other girls at summer camp share their stories, Heaven seemed poised to speak but unable to insert herself into the conversation.

Tarana Burke, a camp director, knew what was coming the next day when Heaven – not her real name – asked to speak with her the next day. She dodged her for hours, until she was finally corners and the stories she feared came tumbling forth.

"She started pouring out gory details of what happened to her at the hands of her mother's boyfriend," remembered Burke, a Bronx native and lifelong civil rights activist. "I'm 22 at this time, and I'm afraid of doing anything wrong. I didn't say anything."

Instead, she sent the girl to another counselor – a move that haunted her. Burke, too, had survived sexual violence as a child, but at the time she didn't have the courage to speak those two transformative words: "Me too."

Burke has since made it her life's work to advocate for the survivors of sexual violence and to connect them to the resources they need. Now a senior director of programs for Girls at Gender Equity, Burke has dedicated more than 25 years of her life to social justice and to laying the groundwork for a movement that was initially created to help young women of color who survived sexual abuse and assault.

SUNY Broome welcomed her to campus May 8 for an empowering and moving talk that packed the Baldwin Gym.

"Sexual harassment and sexual assault is not new, but as a result of Me Too, we have a keener sense of its magnitude and its pervasiveness," said Professor Margherita Rossi, founding member of the SUNY Broome Women's Institute, which helped bring Burke to campus.

"For Tarana Burke, it's not about the accolades, it's about awareness. It's about listening. It's about understanding," Professor Rossi said.

The start of Me Too

Recently featured on the cover of Time magazine as one of the most influential people of 2018, Burke first became involved in battling injustice when she was 15 years old and organized protests in connection with the Central Park jogger case. She found her mission in activism — and also a way to redirect her own energy as a survivor of sexual violence.

In Selma, Alabama, she helped found the "Just Be" program for teen girls, which aimed to ground them in a sense of self-worth. The program expanded to local middle schools, where she discovered that many young girls had experience of sexual violence and abuse. The resources didn't exist to deal with the problem at either the school or the local rape crisis center, she found to her dismay.

"If I can't find these resources, what does that mean? When I was 12 or 13, what did I need someone to say?" she said. "I realized: I was the resource. I didn't have a lot, but I had experience – and Google."

The first thing the girls needed was language to talk about and thus frame their experience. "We started with language and we started with the idea that healing is possible, that wholeness is possible," Burke said.

Me Too hit social media in 2006 with a MySpace page – which led to the discovery t. adult women also needed resources to deal with sexual abuse. Fast-forward to 2017, when she watched the Me Too movement explode, as women began sharing their stories with the now famous hashtag in the wake of the Harvey Weinstein sexual abuse allegations.

"My work was happening right in front of me," she said. "There is power in knowing that you are not standing there alone." She stepped forward – not to claim ownership of the movement, but to offer her help.

Creating a cultural shift shift.

#MeToo founder Tamara Burke receives a standing ovation after her talk at SUNY Broome.

Me Too has the potential to create a cultural shift, but the shift itself hasn't happened yet, Burke warned. She addressed a number of misconceptions about the movement, especially in the wake of massive media coverage.

"This is not about taking down powerful men and we have to shift that narrative because that's a dangerous one," she cautioned.

The movement isn't limited to sexual harassment in the workplace, although the national conversation has often ended up here; it encompasses all kinds of sexual violence. It's not just a women's movement, but also includes men, trans and genderqueer people – all those who identify as survivors of sexual violence. Survivors also aren't required to share their stories with others; what they share is their own decision.

And Me Too isn't going anywhere. Some people have proclaimed that they're already tired of the movement, Burke recounted - and it's only been six months. There is still a long way to go to achieve that critical cultural

"We are a global community of survivors committed to healing as individuals and as a community," she said.

Me Too also has to be about more than sharing stories and words; it's about collective action. Make sure survivors have the resources they need - and ask them, from a place of power and not pity. Get together with your co-workers and review your workplace's sexual harassment policy. Work toward comprehensive sex education, and teach children about boundaries, consent and respect from a young age. When you find a gap, don't just lament its existence - work to fill it.

"There is something everybody can do. Find your lane," she said.

In addition to the Women's Institute, event co-sponsors include SUNY Broome President Kevin E. Drumm, SUNY Broome's Division of Student Development and Diversity, Student Activities, Student Assembly, President's Task Force on Diversity and Inclusion, Counseling Services, the Center for Civic Engagement and the Broome Community College Foundation; Binghamton University President Harvey Stenger, BU's Women, Gender and Sexuality Studies Program, the Binghamton University Center for Civic Engagement and the Student Association of Binghamton University; the Women's Fund of the Community Foundation of Central NY; and Democratic Women of Broome County.

The Monday Poem: 'Men and Dogs' by K.T. Landon

May 13, 2018 Buzz

The Monday Poem has been brought to you by Professor Jim Gormley of the English Department.

Men and Dogs

BY K. T. LANDON

ENOUGH of beating and fighting, enough of cruelty and neglect. Let us now praise the muscle-bound man in black leather and hard boots who bends down to carry his tiny white dog across the street in her pink collar and bedazzled jacket. Praise the bearded man in flip-flops and tank top, standard poodle at his side every morning on the way to the park. Praise the banker out before dawn digging in the snow to find the three-foot branch that is the only stick his German shepherd thinks worthy of her time. Praise the boys who adorn their mutts with bandannas and take them hiking, take them camping, take them everywhere. Praise all who play fetch for as long as it takes, until both parties are satisfied. Praise the ease of it: how simple it is to tell the dog he loves her, how little proof the dog requires to believe he is a man.

K. T. Landon, a finalist in Narrative's Ninth Annual Poetry Contest, is the author of the chapbook Orange, Dreaming (2017). She received an MFA in writing from Vermont College of Fine Arts and is the 2013 winner of the Arts & Letters PRIME Poetry Prize. She lives in Massachusetts.

Student Village celebrates with a Spring Block Party

May 15, 2018 Buzz

With finals around the corner and students looking for a final breath of fresh air before their examinations, Residence Directors Alexandria Donkor, Justin Banks-McDowell and the RA staff held a large block party on May 13 for the residents of the student village.

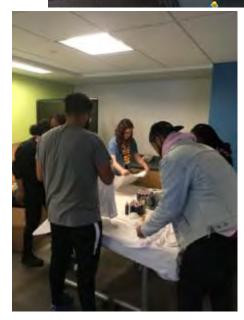

While the party was getting ramped up, it began to sprinkle a bit outside so the team, along with a few helpful residents, moved everything into the Student Village classroom to continue the fun. The festivities included rainbow tie-dying, sea-shell painting, snow cones, cotton candy making, board games, and more — with hamburgers and hot dogs to top everything off.

Having all the residents coming together in one place for a great time just shows how connected the Student Village at SUNY Broome really is!

Sleepout for the Homeless

Join Student Assembly for the 9th Annual Homeless Awareness Sleepout!

More than 17,000 individuals experienced homelessness throughout the Southern Tier last year alone. Of these individuals, 173 families accessed local emergency shelters, with 403 of them being children under the age of 5 years. The goal of the Homeless Awareness Sleepout is to help the Southern Tier Homeless Coalition to bring resources to families and individuals struggling with homelessness.

What is the sleepout?

The Homeless Awareness Sleepout is an event designed to raise funds for the Southern Tier Homeless Coalition. SUNY Broome students sleep out on campus for one night, and have their family and friends sponsor them to do so! There's food, music, entertainment and an awesome community, all coming together to make an impact on homelessness in our community.

Want to get involved?

Use the attached sponsor sign-up sheet to collect sponsors for the event! Go to family, friends, neighbors — everyone you know! — and ask them to support you in sleeping out for homelessness. By sleeping out and gaining sponsors, you are helping the Southern Tier Homeless Coalition to eradicate homelessness in our community. When you find someone who wants to sponsor you to sleep out, simply have them fill in the information in the attached sheet — or do it yourself, if you want! — and be sure to send thank-you notes to your sponsors after the event is over, so they know how much of an impact they helped you make!

Sign Up Sheet (PDF)

The person who collects the most donations through their sponsors will win a $25 gift card to a local restaurant! Event Information

The event will take place at 5 p.m. May 18 on the SUNY Broome Campus. Bring three cans of non-perishable food for entry into a raffle! Pizza will be available for sale for $1 per slice. Live music and entertainment will be provided! Please contact Kevin Carr at carrkm1@acad.sunybroome.edu with questions.

Shyanne Daye

Shyanne Daye

Congratulations to Shyanne Daye, who received the 2017-2018 Scholar Athlete Award from the State University of New York. She is one of 84 recipients from across the state to receive the award, which recognizes outstanding academic excellence and athletic achievement.

To be considered for this award, student athletes were nominated by their campus athletic director. Nominees' academic credentials and athletic achievements were then reviewed by a panel of athletic directors from across SUNY system and members of the SUNY provost's office.

A freshman, Shyanne is part of the SUNY Broome women's tennis team, which again captured Region III championship title on Oct. 7. During the Region III championship in Syracuse, Daye was a finalist at No.1 singles and No. 1 doubles, earning Broome 4 points over the Region III weekend. The Hornets tied for fifth place at the 2017 NJCAA Tennis Championships in Peachtree City, Ga.

A graduate of Susquehanna Valley High School, Shyanne is also a Presidential Honors Scholar. Recipients of the full-tuition scholarship were in the top 10 percent of their high school graduating class.

STEM Stars: SUNY Broome honors 2018 Frank Paul Medal Winners

May 16, 2018 Featured News

Some of the 2018 winners of the Frank Paul Medal of Excellence, with SUNY Broome President Kevin Drumm and Professors Robert Lofthouse and Diana LaBelle.

Frank Paul and the Medal of Excellence that bears his name Frank Paul and the Medal of Excellence that bears his name

One by one, the recipients of the Frank G. Paul Medal of Excellence dipped their heads to receive the bronze medallion on its black-and-gold ribbon.

Thirty area high school students – one male and one female from each school – received the award for their accomplishments in math and science at a

May 15 reception. Their futures will lead them in many different directions under the aegis of science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) — although, for many, the first stop will be at SUNY Broome.

With a love for biology, Kelly Perry of Whitney Point High School sees her future as a nurse – perhaps focused on obstetrics or neonatology. Alexander Amisimov from Vestal is a self-professed "car guy," planning on a career in mechanical and then automotive engineering.

Union-Endicott's Courtney George, on the other hand, doesn't know what path she will take, other than pursuing a degree in Engineering Science at SUNY Broome.

Some of the 2018 winners of the Frank Paul Medal of Excellence, with SUNY Broome President Kevin Drumm and Professors Robert Lofthouse and Diana LaBelle.

That uncertainty is completely normal, according to SUNY Broome Professor Diana LaBelle, co-chair of the Engineering Technologies Department. A SUNY Broome alumna who went on to earn a bachelor's degree from Ivy League Cornell University and a master's degree in robotics from prestigious Carnegie Mellon, LaBelle's career path resembles a winding river, flowing onward but in ever new patterns.

The reception's keynote speaker, LaBelle discussed her career, common questions students face and life-lessons.

Her love of STEM perhaps first took root when she was a young child, following her father around as he made household repairs. Not ready for college after high school, she instead enlisted in the Marine Corps, where she became an aircraft mechanic and later an inspector, putting her stamp of approval on completed work.

As a SUNY Broome student, she questioned her future trajectory. She liked many subject areas and worried about making the wrong choices. The students in the room may feel the same, she noted.

"I wasn't sure what I wanted to do. My career shows that's okay," she said.

When she graduated from Broome – then BCC – she realized that she liked her alma mater, and ultimately wanted to help others achieve their potential. She taught her first class – a summer term lab – at SUNY Broome before she even finished her bachelor's degree. From there, she taught classes in math and physics, worked as a systems engineer at BAE Systems for several years and eventually landed full-time in the classroom.

In some senses, her life path is coming full-circle, as SUNY Broome is working on establishing a future aircraft maintenance degree program. "Nothing you do to educate yourself is ever going to be a waste of time," she advised students.

She offered other life-lessons, too. Embrace change, and recognize that you may end up on a different career path than you originally imagined. That's perfectly fine; it's okay to try new things.

Develop time management skills, and recognize that there are situations where you can't get everything done and need to prioritize. Focus on being a student and make sure you don't put in too many hours at your off-campus job. If you need to, sell your car and take the bus rather than jeopardize your academic future.

Students also need to develop a support system. "We can help here with that here," she said. "Look at everyone around you. These people are going to help you make it through the program."

The importance of STEM

The Medal of Excellence's namesake, Frank G. Paul, spent more than four decades a IBM engineer and believed in math, science and education, said SUNY Broome President Kevin E. Drumm. Frank Paul served as a SUNY Broome trustee as well as president of the Broome Community College Foundation, which provides scholarships to many students.

Math and science have always been important in human society, from ancient engineers who built roads, aqueducts and buildings that last to this day, to early mathematicians, physicians and scientists of all kinds who laid the groundwork for discoveries to come.

Scientific discoveries have changed our understanding of the world dramatically through the centuries and even the decades. To the young scholarship recipients, the moon landing is ancient history and even the space shuttle a quaint image of the past. Instead, they may live to see the first human beings set foot on Mars, Dr. Drumm said.

"It's up to each generation to pursue that defining human mission: to push the boundaries of discovery, to increase our understanding of the universe and our world, and to make it a better place," President Drumm said.

Alexis Van Donsel, of Vestal High School, said she appreciates the logical and rational nature of STEM fields. She plans to major in Engineering Science at SUNY Broome, and eventually combine her interest in engineering with architecture.

"I really like design and figuring out how it's going to work," she said.

Two medal winners – Courtney George of Union-Endicott and Dylan Palmer of Chenango Forks – learned at the reception that they also won the Francis and Lillian Paul merit scholarships. They will each receive $1,000 a year, with an additional $1,000 a year when they transfer to a four-year school to complete an engineering degree.

"I'm really excited and grateful, too," Palmer said of the scholarship award. Math and science come naturally to this future electrical engineer, who has already interned at Raymond Corp. and Keystone Associates.

This year's medal recipients, by high school, are:

Buzz report: Literacy Legacy Project launches with well-attended event

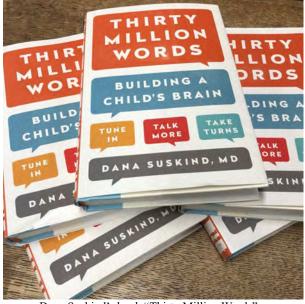

May 16, 2018 Buzz

Dana Suskind's book "Thirty Million Words"

By Gina Minoia

The Literacy Legacy Project, created by Professor Lisa Strahley, addresses one of the most pressing issues in our community: promoting childhood literacy, starting from the day a baby is born. Last Thursday, the program's official launch drew over 100 supporters who enjoyed an evening of music, food and a variety of talks by guest speakers including Dana Suskind, author of Thirty Million Words

Dana Suskind's book "Thirty Million Words"

Strahley, along with development leads Lenny Grozier and Julie Lamuraglia, believe in the "power of loving words through talking, singing, reading, and playing every single day." The importance of engaging little ones from birth is backed up by concrete studies which suggest that 85% of brain development occurs during the first few years of a child's life.

Dana Suskind, a Chicago cochlear implant surgeon and author of Thirty Million Words, inspired the Children's Reading Connection's "Community Read" with her extensive research and advocacy for early childhood literacy. To kick off the Community Read, Dr. Suskind made a skype appearance at the LLP Launch to talk about her mission and field audience questions.

She solidified some of the night's themes, saying, "It's not just about getting children [age 0-3] ready for school, it's about encouraging healthy brain development." Suskind developed her passion for words when she noticed how a rich language environment — or lack thereof — affected literacy rates in the deaf children she operated on.

Other voices filled the room to inform and educate, including SUNY Broome's Dr. Jennifer Musa, who gave a mini-science lesson about childhood brain development. On the subject of "blooming" and "pruning" synapses, Musa explained that "the more language and stimuli [young children] receive, the stronger synapses become." With her parting words, Dr. Musa expressed hope that the Project would "[empower] parents and caregivers to start on day one."

County Executive Jason Garnar and Assemblywoman Donna Lupardo also shared words of support and excitement about the Literacy Legacy Project. Garnar talked about one of LLP's current initiatives, "Baby's First Book. Starting on March 1, every baby born in Broome County has received a special welcome gift: Karma Wilson's children's book Babycakes.

"Babies born today got this book," said Garnar, who has provided generous support for the program along with local hospitals, SUNY Broome's Civic Engagement Center and other local businesses.

Dr. Lenny Grozier outlined some ongoing and future initiatives from the Literacy Legacy Project: the One Book: Preschool program gifts a copy of Suzanne Bloom's Is This the Bus for Us? to every incoming preschooler in the county. Similarly, each kindergarten student will receive How Rocket Learned to Read by Tad Hills. Grozier also tells us to expect more books available to children and parents in "food pantries, buses and laundromats," as well as banners promoting reading at a young age. Translations and recording of the featured children's' books will also be available soon.

Learn how you can support the Literacy Legacy Project by visiting www.sunybroome.edu/literacylegacy or emailing Lisa Strahley at strahleyla@sunybroome.edu or Julie Lamuraglia at lamuragliaj@sunybroome.edu. Writer Gina Minoia is a sophomore in the Education program.

project was inspired by reading Orange is the New Black by Piper Kerman, a nonfiction memoir by the author who spent a year in prison on drug charges.

Club President Orion Barber, VP Dawn Shefler, VP Marly Cherilus and Faculty Adviser Professor I.J. Byrnes decided to support this literary and rehabilitative project in light of the skyrocketing increase of the number of women behind bars since the 1980s, the problems faced by the children of single women in jail, and the correlation of imprisonment with mental health and addiction issues among women inmates.

Chapter President Barber said, "Ensuring continued literacy for the incarcerated is a vital issue of equity in their rehabilitation and preparation to re-enter society."

VP Shefler noted, "Books are a wonderful way to explore one's interests and values. Reading can help a person envision multiple versions of the future and figure out which one is the right path to follow. I can think of few populations so in need of the opportunity for personal discovery as the prison population, so I am pleased to assist in providing them a catalyst."

VP Cherilus commented, "I am so elated to be apart of the Women's Prison book Project. I believe that literacy opens doors to many different portals of knowledge."

The SUNY Broome Women's Discussion Group would like to acknowledge and thank the book donors involved in this project:

From Haiti to Ireland: Global Service Learning helps Kassidy and Phoebe set their future course

May 18, 2018 Featured News

SUNY Broome students headed to Ireland over spring break for a global service learning course.

Kassidy Maxie, right, in Haiti in 2014.

While studying public health in Ireland, SUNY Broome students had the opportunity to learn the ins and outs of a different healthcare system, and to share their skills and talents in service of others.

But the Irish had much to teach them as well, whether in rural Wexford and Donegal or urban Dublin.

For one, you always make Irish coffee for someone else – never yourself — as a measure of hospitality. Any problem can be solved after having a cup of tea. Life isn't meant to be rushed.

"Everything to Irish people is 'grand.' They're a very peaceful people," recalled Kassidy Maxie, a SUNY Broome alumna who took part in SUNY Broome's first-ever Global Health in Ireland course over spring break – and learned that her own first name is Irish, meaning "curly-headed one."

"Dublin reminds me of New York City but a much cleaner version," she added. "They really enchanted me," she said.

Global Health in Ireland is the college's latest Global Service Learning Course, joining the established Health for Haiti program. In fact, many students end up doing both courses, giving of their time and talents in two very different environments.

Both courses, however, have certain commonalities beyond the fact that they take place on islands. They draw participating students from a wide range of majors and academic backgrounds, involve both service and cultural activities, and give students the opportunity to truly connect with the cultures they serve.

Phoebe Macauley, left, in Ireland

"It's what makes Broome so great: Their study abroad programs are so personal," said Maxie, who participated in the very first Health for Haiti class in 2014, while working on her Associate's degree in Individual Studies.

Changing lives

Students are drawn to Global Service Learning courses for different reasons: a chance to travel, the opportunity to explore their heritage, to earn needed credits and to use their skills.

For Clinical Lab Technician major Phoebe Macauley, it was all of the above. She went to Haiti in January 2017 and Ireland this spring.

Macauley, who plans to transfer to Upstate Medical University this fall to major in medical technology, needed Liberal Arts credits and Health for Haiti fit her interests. "I've always been passionate about international travel and global health, and I knew I wanted to coordinate my medical experience into international missions," she said.

Maxie, a woman of color originally from Detroit, was enrolled in the Binghamton Acting age Program when she decided to take the inaugural Health for Haiti course. It was a chance to travel internationally for the first time and to learn about herself.

While Haiti reaffirmed Phoebe's goals, it gave Kassidy a chance to explore new directions and refine her life path. Visiting with children in orphanages and the dying, she recognized that she truly wanted to help the vulnerable, leading to an interest in teaching and later public health.

While in Haiti, Phoebe worked at the pharmacy in Grande Saline, counting out medication in a linguistically challenging environment; prescriptions were written in Creole, French or even Latin, and she needed to work closely with translators.

Connecting with the Haitian people while distributing food changed her outlook on life, and broke through cultural and linguistic barriers.

Kassidy Maxie in Haiti

"One older woman – she looked at me with eyes filled with gratitude. Rice and beans were making their year," Macauley, a Binghamton native, remembered. "It told me this is where I was supposed to be and was supposed to be doing.

"A little boy came up and he just took my hand. We were fast friends," she continued. "I left part of my heart in Haiti. The people on a whole captured what international medical missions really mean."

Phoebe Macauley makes a friend in Haiti.

Unexpectedly, Macauley remained involved with the Health for Haiti project even when she returned. Professor Maureen Hankin recruited her for a data project in which she inputted four years' worth of patient information from the Grande Saline clinics into a database. She just finished the massive undertaking, which ended up teaching her Creole – the language of many reports – along the way.

"Haiti exploded in my life," she said.

From Haiti to Ireland

After graduating from SUNY Broome, Maxie transferred to Hunter College, where she majored in History and minored in Africana Studies. Hoping to become a teacher, she applied to Teach For America, which placed her in a Harlem middle school, teaching humanities to sixth-graders.

"She's like mom," Maxie said. "Broome was filled with people who loved and cared about me."

Hankin alerted prior Health for Haiti students of the new course in Ireland, encouraging them to take the opportunity and travel. Macaulay jumped at the chance, using the savings she set aside from her job. In fact, her final semester at SUNY Broome was filled with travel opportunities: clinical rotations in Albany, Syracuse and Ithaca, the Ireland trip, and then back on clinicals in Albany.

Macaulay had a chance to explore the CLT field in Ireland, where the doctor she shadowed had a basic lab in his office. She and the other Global Health students participated in community rural health initiatives, educated participants in nutrition and proper handwashing, and participated in cultural activities.

"It really gave me confirmation of my decision to pursue global health," Macaulay said. "I love the lab, but I also love educating people about nutrition and healthcare practices."

On both global service learning trips, Kassidy was among the few students of color. Paradoxically, that seemed to set her apart in Haiti, but not in Ireland.

"In Haiti, people were like, 'What are you?' I was weird to them," she said. "In Ireland, two of us were black. They were so open to us. They just embraced us, even the older generations. It was really nice not to be 'othered."

While Haiti shifted Kassidy's path to teaching, Ireland shifted it yet again to another core interest: public health. She is currently pursuing a master's degree in Global Public Health from the University of North Carolina – Chapel Hill, an online program that will allow her to continue her teaching career.

She's not sure what form her career will ultimately take, but plans to continue traveling globally and addressing global issues, perhaps by starting a Phoebe, who plans to earn her bachelor's degree at Upstate Medical University, plans to work as a medical technologist in the United States and then take what she knows internationally on a short-term basis – similar to what she did for Health for Haiti. Ultimately, she would like to help set up blood labs internationally and train individuals in the countries she serves.

SUNY Broome students in Ireland

Visiting Dublin

Her education at SUNY Broome has prepared her well for this path, she said. In the United States, technology leads to quick and thorough results from blood tests. Students in the CLT program, however, also learn to do these tests in low-tech ways that translate well to environments such as Haiti.

"I know they are preparing me to work internationally. It gives me hope for what I really want to do," she said.

It's quite a change from her high school days, when she vowed never to attend her local community college. That changed when she learned about the CLT program and met professors with years of experience in both the field and research.

"I am so impressed with the education I have received in the Health Sciences department at SUNY Broome," she said.

SUNY Broome Students tour NYS Emergency Preparedness Training Center

CJESSA students recently visited the New York State Department of Homeland Security and Emergency Services Preparedness Training Center.

SUNY Broome Criminal Justice & Emergency Services Adjunct Instructor Joe Julian and Assistant Professor Leigh Morrissey took a group of students from the Criminal Justice & Emergency Services Student Association (CJESSA) to the New York State Department of Homeland Security and Emergency Services Preparedness Training Center (SPTC) in Oriskany on May 11, 2018.

This facility provides first responders (law enforcement officers, fire, EMT, homeland security and military officials) with practical training to "effectively prevent, prepare for, respond to and recover from" terrorist and natural disasters, featuring simulation at the highest level. Realistic training scenarios often include various departments learning to work together with actors playing victims in Hollywood style make-up. This facility is recognized as one of the finest state operated centers in the United States.

CJESSA students were able to view the various training areas of the facility including the Cityscape (built like a movie set) where mock active shooting and bomb scenarios occur, the new swift water rescue area, and numerous other training areas. At the end of the tour, the group entered the main building where beams from World Trade Center remind everyone of the sacrifice made by so many on 9-11.

This is the third visit made by CJESSA and we hope it can continue each year. This opportunity provides invaluable experience to our students who are interested in careers in the field of criminal justice and emergency services.

CJESSA would like to thank: Adjunct Instructor Joe Julian (lead faculty advisor to CJESSA) and Assistant Professor Leigh Morrissey (faculty advisor to CJESSA) along with SPTC Instructors Bob Stallman, Todd Fortis and Gerry Morton for this great out-of-the-classroom learning experience. If you are interested in joining CJESSA in the fall, please contact Instructor Joe Julian at julianj@sunybroome.edu.

Visit the Emerald Isle: Join SUNY Broome for Irish Literature this Fall and see Ireland with new eyes

May 21, 2018 Buzz

Ireland is a nation known for its striking beauty, its political turmoil, and its long and illustrious literary history. We invite you to join SUNY Broome Professors Mary Donnelly and Andrew Haggerty for LIT 277: Irish Literature, followed by an eight-day trip to the Emerald Isle!

The course itself will be a survey of Irish literature from the Bronze Age (the Táin Bó Cúailnge, or The Cattle Raid at Cooley) to the modern era (the Troubles). Authors covered will include William Butler Yeats, James Joyce, Edna O'Brien and Brian Friel.

Once the semester ends, we will be leaving for a trip to explore Ireland through the literary lens. We'll be visiting Dublin, Limerick, and Galway to see the locations that inspired the imaginations of our authors. Local agents Carr's Holidays are designing an exclusive travel package just for the class.

Like all Literature classes, this is a Writing Emphasis course section. Students must complete ENG 110 before registering. Additional fees associated with international travel

Please contact Dr. Mary Donnelly, 607-778-5323 for more information.

In the Community: Downtown Singers' concert features rarely performed Brahms

May 22, 2018 Buzz

The Binghamton Downtown Singers' upcoming all-Brahms program will feature a variety of choral works, most never performed before by the Singers and many rarely heard anywhere in concert. The chorus includes several SUNY Broome graduates and Professor Glenn Modrak.

"An Evening of Brahms" will be begin at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, June 9, at Sarah Jane Johnson Memorial United Methodist Church, 208 Main St., Johnson City. It will be conducted by Kristina Ruffo, who also prepared the chorus.

Some pieces will have orchestra accompaniment; others will feature pianists Margaret "Pej" Reitz and Jinah Lee. Vocal soloists are baritone Timothy LeFebvre, soprano Michelle Thompson and tenor Erik Thompson.

The program will include the Liebeslieder Waltzes (Love Song Waltzes); Von ewiger Liebe (Of Eternal Love); Die Mainacht (May Night); Ave Maria; Triumphlied; Gesang der Parzen (Song of the Fates), and, from A German Requiem, "How Lovely is Thy Dwelling Place."

Several pieces will be sung in German; others in English. Ave Maria, performed by the women of the Downtown Singers and the Maine-Endwell High School Women's Choir, will be sung in Latin.

Both Triumphlied and Gesang der Parzen are not often performed. On the other hand, the Liebeslieder Waltzes are among Brahms' most popular choral works. The love songs are written in Ländler style (think Maria and von Trapp's oh-so-meaningful dance in The Sound of Music).

General admission tickets for the concert are $15. Call 607-648-5032 or email DTS_Concerts@stny.rr.com. For more information about the Downtown Singers, visit downtownsingers.org.

Funding for the concert is provided in part by a project grant from the Broome County Arts Council's United Cultural Fund. This project is also made possible with public funds from the Chenango Arts Council's Decentralization Grants program, a re-grant program of the NYS Council of the Arts, with support from Governor Andrew Cuomo and the NYS Legislature. Additional support for Broome County is provided by the Stewart W. & Wilma C. Hoyt Foundation.

The Monday Poem: 'Emerging' by Pablo Neruda

The Monday Poem is brought to you by Professor Jim Gormley of the English Department.

Emerging

Pablo Neruda

A man says yes without knowing how to decide even what the question is, and is caught up, and then is carried along and never again escapes from his own cocoon; and that's how we are, forever falling into the deep well of other beings; and one thread wraps itself around our necks, another entwines a foot, and then it is impossible, impossible to move except in the well — nobody can rescue us from other people.

It seems as if we don't know how to speak; it seems as if there are words which escape, which are missing, when have gone away and left us to ourselves, tangled up in snares and threads.

And all at once, that's it; we no longer know what it's all about, but we are deep inside it, and now we will never see with the same eyes as once we did when we were children playing. Now these eyes are closed to us, now our hands emerge from different arms.

And therefore when you sleep, you are alone in your dreaming, and running freely through the corridors of one dream only, which belongs to you.

Oh never let them come to steal our dreams, never let them entwine us in our bed.

Let us hold on to the shadows to see if, from our own obscurity, we emerge and grope along the walls, lie in wait for the light, to capture it, till, once and for all time, it becomes our own, the sun of every day.

Professor Wojdat achieves designation as Certified Hospitality Educator

May 29, 2018 Buzz

Focus on Accomplishments logo

Professor Rey C. Wojdat, chairman of SUNY Broome's Hospitality Programs Department, has achieved the internationally recognized designation of Certified Hospitality Educator (CHE) from the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Institute (AHLEI).

Candidates for the certification must first submit their curriculum vitae and employment verification to the AHLEI, forming the basis of eligibility determination adjudicated by a professional panel. A lengthy, proctored exam follows several days of intensive instruction on post-secondary educational syllabus construction and higher education course assessment in adherence to the six learning levels of Bloom's Taxonomy, adult learning theory, interactive teaching methodologies, content presentation methods, and classroom evaluation techniques.

Workshop training was conducted at South Dakota State University in Brookings, South Dakota. Certification is based on a candidate's mastery of pre-workshop self-study materials and required assignments, participation in workshop discussions and role plays, and results of the comprehensive written final exam. A lapel pin indicating the designation is awarded to successful candidates.

Congratulations, Professor Wojdat!

The Spice of Life: Jessica follows her passion for Hospitality

May 29, 2018 Featured News

Jessica Nurczynski

Jessica Nurczynski

Sometimes, a chosen career path doesn't work out the way you hope. The passion fades and rather than fulfilling you, it chafes – becoming a job rather than a career, something to endure on the way to a paycheck.

You have choices to make: to endure the slog, or to see it as an opportunity to retool, to expand your horizons and find where you really belong.

Jessica Nurczynski made that second choice. She first graduated from SUNY Broome in 2011 with a degree in Business Administration, going on to SUNY Oswego, where she earned a bachelor's degree in marketing with a minor in graphic design. The Owego native then found a job in her field as a proofreader – and found that she hated it, and didn't want to spend her professional life behind a desk.

"I didn't like what I was doing; it was a dead-end job with no potential for growth," she said. "So I decided to go back to school."

Hospitality has been a long-time interest of hers, and she had considered attending Broome-Tioga BOCES' culinary program back in high school. She drew on this interest when she returned to SUNY Broome, earning an A.O.S. degree in Event Management in May 2018 and continuing to work toward an A.A.S. in Hotel and Restaurant Management.

Click here to learn about programs in the Business and Professional Studies Division.

Click here to apply.

"I love that the classes are small and you really get to know your professors well," she said. She particularly appreciates Professor Maria Montemagno and instructor Christina Hasemann, pointing out: "They're very knowledgeable. They love what they're doing, and they set you up to succeed."

She honed her classroom experience with internships at the Binghamton Club and, later, at Baked Euphoria, which confirmed her ultimate dream of running a café or bakery someday with her sister. Her short-term goals include working at an event center, possibly as a wedding planner or banquet manager, helping couples plan their ultimate celebration.

At SUNY Broome, she also found herself branching out in unexpected ways, becoming involved with campus life. She joined the Hospitality Club, participating in a wide range of events from campus soup sales to a New York City field trip. She served as vice president of Alpha Beta Gamma, the international business honor society, which also gave her the opportunity to attend a national conference.

Drawing on her marketing background, she also curated the Hospitality Programs' Facebook and Instagram pages, eliciting interest in her division. She's made friends, too; her programs are small enough where she knows everyone in her department, allowing her to forge connections that a larger university may lack.

"Coming back for the second time has been eye-opening," she reflected. "My advice to students is this: Go join that club. Do extracurricular activities. Talk to people."

And contrary to popular belief, students should know that there is plenty to do on campus – as well as in downtown Binghamton and throughout the area, from concerts and festivals to great food options. As a Hospitality Programs major, it's something she has seen herself – and wish others realized, too.

After completing her Event Management degree this May, she is taking a bit of a break, academically speaking, before returning to class and finishing her Hotel and Restaurant Management degree. This summer, she landed an internship at Yellowstone National Park, which she discovered through the Applied Learning & Career Center's Purple Briefcase program. She will be a resident coordinator – a resident assistant for volunteers who are spending the summer working at the park, she explained.

She is looking forward to her internship, as well as pursuing a career that fits her nature and interests. Hospitality careers can be tough, requiring long hours and a passion for meeting the customer's needs, she acknowledges. Still, it brings greater rewards than any desk job could, at least for this future bakery owner and event planner.

"I like interacting with people. I need for something to change every day," she explai "I need some spice in life. That's the great thing about the hospitality industry – it provides that."
