

Make a difference: take CTP 275 Community Internship

May 4, 2015

The Spring Term is rapidly drawing to a close but consider enrolling in a community intern course (CTP 275—Community Internship) for the coming Fall semester. Internships provide students hands-on learning experiences, an opportunity to look at a possible career or network with people in the field, and, finally, a way of giving something back to your community. Internships can be developed with many of the local nonprofit organizations, schools, government agencies and even on the SUNY Broome campus.

Last Tuesday, the College hosted a “Heroin Awareness” evening. The West Gym was packed with more than 500 people, with a standing-room audience listening to the ravages of the continuing heroin epidemic in our community and its rising death toll. Millennials, among others, can play a great role in helping to reverse this continuing crisis. Numerous internship opportunities exist which would allow students to become part of the solution so consider an internship in this area, or any other area of interest to you.

Students who wish to learn more about the CTP 275 Community Internship course should contact Professor Doug Garnar at 778-5094; email garnardc@sunybroome.edu or come to his office, T-211B.

Filed Under: Uncategorized