

SUNY Broome photography instructor's work featured in national magazine

June 23, 2015

Fine art photographer and SUNY Broome adjunct faculty member JW Johnston is featured in Outdoor Photographer magazine's July cover story on finding the best scenic spots at popular national parks. Johnston's photograph of Shenandoah National Park's South River Falls is highlighted and he writes in the article about his hike to the site and how he produced the image. “So much of what I’ve learned about natural landscape photography came from reading Outdoor Photographer over many years,” said Johnston. “So to be published in that magazine means a great deal to me.”

Johnston’s photograph of South River Falls was displayed locally in 2004 during his solo exhibition “Shenandoah Waterfalls” at Anthony Brunelli Fine Arts in Binghamton.

Johnston’s latest work is on exhibit in “The Photography Show” at Windsor Whip Works Art Center’s upper gallery, located at 98 Main Street in Windsor through August 1.

JW Johnston teaches Beginning Photography (ART112) and History of Photography (ART146) in the Communications and Media Arts Department. He also teaches Continuing Education photography classes. He owns JW Johnston Photography and conducts independent workshops. His annual Weekend Workshop Intensive is scheduled for August 14-16 in Whitney Point. Johnston was profiled in WSKG-TV's Artist Cafe program in 2013 in a segment that has aired across the country. WSKG also honored him in 2010 with the top prize in photography during the Art-in-Motion Competition and Tour. In 2012, his work was chosen for a juried international exhibition Abstract Expressions at PhotoPlace Gallery in Middlebury, Vermont and his work was recognized in the Portfolio edition of Black and White Magazine.
