

Theater Instructor Jan Quackenbush takes hiatus

June 8, 2015

Long-time theater instructor and playwright Jan Quackenbush is taking a hiatus from teaching to concentrate on and finish a few writing projects he has been working on for awhile. One of these is a Vietnam War-based work called "Troupes."

Jan's distinguished service to the SUNY Broome theater area, the numerous students from other disciplines who take theater classes and the college in general has been considerable and widely appreciated by many since he began in 2002. We are sorry to see him leave even temporarily, but glad that he will be able to continue the work that has made him such a well-known and respected playwright both in America and in Europe. Adios, Jan, for now. We all look forward to your return.

From Katherine Bacon and all those in the Department of Performing Arts

Filed Under: Focus on Accomplishments